"Om Smagen kan man ikke disputere" siger et gammelt Ordsprog og dog, hvor storslaaet og skønt Niagarafaldene end virker om Sommeren, naar alle Vandene i uhindret Kraft bruser frem, vil de fleste dog sikkert bøje sig i undrende Betagethed for den Pragt som Vinteren iklæder dem: Træerne er pudrede hvide af fin Rim, den kolde, sorte Jord og de nøgne, skarpe Klipper dækkes af Sneens Hvidhed, i alle Kroge, hvor Vandenes Kraft ikke er for stor, optaarner sig Isbjerge i sære forvredne Former, kæmpemæssige Istapper, blinkende som det reneste Krystal, hænger ned fra Faldenes Top, kort sagt, man føler sig som vandrende man i et Ferige - et Krystalpalads, og da vil sikkert alle bøje sig i dyb Beundring for de Skønhedsindtryk man her modtager.

EN SØNDAGSJÆGER

Det er en bekendt Sag, at er der noget man ikke maa møde, naar man træder ud af sin Dør for at begive sig ud paa Jagt, saa er det en gammel Kælling. Det enhver Jæger, og hvis Valget staar til ham vil han absolut foretrække en vild Kongetiger eller en udbrudt Galajslave fremfor saadan en umaadelig skikkelig og rar gammel Dame, der absolut intet ondt har i Sinde. Se nu her den ulykkelige Herr. Træf, hvad saa han ikke gennemgaa af Mærkværdigheder paa sin Jagtudflugt, blot fordi det første han møder om Morgenens er saadan gammel Madam.

A WOULD BE SPORTSMAN.

Sindogsjageren
Everybody knows that on going out hunting the worst thing that may happen to you is to meet an old woman. You might just as well return home, you will have no chance that day anyhow. Any hunter would rather meet with the wildest animal than with such an old dame, who intends no harm to anybody. Now look at our poor Mr. Dick, the first thing he meets in the morning is an old woman, and there is no end to the troubles he is encumbered with during the day.

UNDER NAVAL COLOURS.

Under Marineflaget.
This picture presents to us the life onboard a man-of-war at sea. We see how the mariners spend their day, we see them at work and we see them enjoy themselves at leisure hours. Much work has to be done, but the men always look bright and content, and when they go back to civil life they always look back to the days of the service under the naval colours with joy and pleasure.

THE COWBOY AND THE SCHOOL MARM

A thrilling Indian subject admirably tinted. The mistress of the Western School has two suitors for her hand. She prefers the younger of the two, and the other, enraged at his rebuff, plots with three rascals to kidnap the girl. They come upon her suddenly while she is riding, and compel her to ride to another district at the point of their pistols. An Indian girl and boy, whom the teacher has befriended, observe the capture. The boy tells the girl to follow the rascals, marking their course with strings of pearls which she has to sell. Meanwhile the boy goes and warns the cowboys. Thrilling scenes follow, the Indian girl falling at last exhausted. She has, however, fulfilled her purpose, and the cowboys follow the trail. The dastardly lover fires at his pursuers, holding the girl before him as a shield. By this means he disables several of the cowboys, but his last cartridge used, he is soon engaged in a death struggle with his rival. The villain is overpowered, and the two lovers rejoice over their escape.

Length 925 feet.

OSCAR STRODLT SOM JÄGER

THE EXPERT HUNTER

A portly old fellow, desiring to go out shooting, arrays himself with great care in what he evidently considers to be the correct shooting costume, and, tended by a page in buttons, sallies forth for a day's sport. The good man is quite oblivious to the rude comments of passers-by. He brings down a number of birds with his gun, but turning his attention to the ground again, he empties a charge into a fine fat beast, which turns out to be a man. Our sporting friend has to satisfy a large claim for compensation. This so upsets him that, meeting two fishermen, he persuades one of them to give him a fishing rod in exchange for his gun, and proceeds to engage in the more peaceful pursuit of angling. After hooking a few dead cats, the unlucky angler tumbles into the water, and decides to have no more sport for that day.

Length 381 feet.

NIAGARA FALLS

This is a splendid picture of what is perhaps the world's most famous sight. The first scene takes above the falls and gives a splendid impression of the tremendous rush of water just before the stream hurls itself into the abyss below. Small wonder that for miles above the falls no boat can withstand the torrent.

The America Falls and the Horseshoe are photographed from Goat Island, and are spectacles of beauty that is beyond the power of words to describe. A panoramic view of the whole area is given from several points of view, and in one picture a rainbow is very clearly seen.

Length 442 feet.
